DRIVER'S SEAT

A few years ago, on a bitter, rain-spitting day outside the industrial town of Graz, Austria, I found myself holding on for dear life. Some of you will recognize immediately that this is the home of one of the world's most renowned car factories, Magna-Steyr. Magna has built everything from the Alpenwagen (in 1919, in the rubble of the Great War) to the Jeep Commander to the Audi TT and a smattering of almost every model that rides on Europe's roads.

They also make the Mercedes-Benz G-Wagon, or Geländewagen, one of the most butch SUVs ever built. It was conceived by the Shah of Iran in the 1970s, who coveted a Land Rover Defender but wanted his own version. Mercedes-Benz was happy to oblige, but by the time they finished building, the Shah was deposed in the 1979 Iranian Revolution. The Shah's loss; luxury offroading's gain.

Back to Graz: I dared to see if this beast was offroad capable, or only appeared so. After all, most owners rarely leave the well-paved roads of Orange County or Miami-Dade. So Mercedes-Benz arranged for me to be driven up the Shockl, a madman's mountain trail that feels like a 2-mile plane crash. Yes. The G-Wagon is all that.

This month, we went in search of the next version of the Shah's prize and found Ineos, a new luxury offroader that can actually handle the hard stuff. Inspired by the original line of Land Rover Defenders, Ineos has released the Grenadier, named after the London pub in which CEO Jim Ratcliffe came up with the idea. Every part is hand-assembled and made to be as robust as any SUV out there—but with a luxurious twist.

In this issue, we dive deep into what you can do with your Ineos, or G-Wagon, or Defender, or Bentayga, once you get it. Overlanding isn't just for Wrangler fanatics. We also take a close look at one of the coolest trends in dining in 2024: Supper Clubs! It's not just dinner, and it's not theater. Instead, it's great food with more than a dash of style.

We also take a test drive in the new Ferrari SF90 Spider, which has a theatrical presence of its own. It's also extremely fast. On the watch front, Roberta looks at one of my favorite classes of timepieces, the GMT watch. We pick out stalwarts like Rolex, TAG Heuer, and Grand Seiko, who each make an exquisite version of this three-handed wristwatch.

There's a lot for everyone this month. Hold on tight!

Warm regards,

Mike Guy— Editor-in-Chief

FORCE OF NATURE

1. BUY

BUY

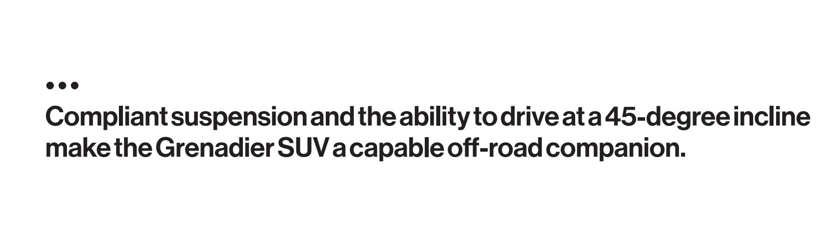

It's January in Scotland, and we're driving down the most minimal of trails somewhere near Loch Lomond in the Scottish Highlands. Any macadam and concrete vanished long ago, replaced by an amalgamation of muck that humans have faced for millennia: mud, water, snow and rocks. This isn't much of a concern until reaching a crest. There, the trail turns and slopes perilously downward more than 300 feet at a 25-degree angle.

But Mother Nature's challenge proves illusory as our trusty steed, the Ineos Grenadier Fieldmaster, demonstrates just how unflappable and unstoppable it is. The remarkably capable full-size, body-on-frame SUV is the vision of Sir Jim Ratcliffe, CEO of the world's third-largest petrochemical company, Ineos. Privately held, Ineos is comprised of 25,000 employees working at 39 businesses in 31 countries and generating annual revenue of $65 billion. This is one startup that doesn't need to beg for development funding.

The idea to produce the Ineos Grenadier came to Ratcliffe in 2017 at his favorite watering hole, The Grenadier pub in Belgrave Square, London. Land Rover had ceased production of the Defender, and its replacement was not expected to be the utilitarian rock crawler that had long thrived in the world's most isolated regions. After attempting to buy the Defender's tooling and being rebuffed, Ratcliffe decided to build his own vehicle to fill the void. This is no small task. Automobiles are the most complex and regulated consumer goods in the world. But Ratcliffe was undaunted, and the company's newest division, Ineos Automotive, announced

A full box-sectioned ladder-frame chassis and heavy-duty beam axles provide a solid foundation for the Grenadier as it capably navigates across any terrain using permanent four-wheel drive. Even with its rugged, utilitarian nature, this off-roader promises a civilized ride. Steering wheel buttons make the infotainment system easy to control, while a red "toot" button serves as a gentler alternative to the standard horn. Specially designed Recaro seats come in a variety of trims.

Stripped-back electronics and easily accessible information simplify the driving experience and maximize comfort sans unnecessary frill. Of course, the vehicle is fully customizable with several options and accessories to tailor the model to you.

it will build a new old-school SUV, one named for his favorite pub, where currency is stapled to the ceiling.

Their first vehicle, the Ineos Grenadier, is remarkable. Manufactured at a former Mercedes-Benz plant in Hambach, France, the five-passenger Grenadier is offered in luxury-oriented Fieldmaster and off-road Trialmaster trim with parts sourced from blue-chip automotive suppliers. BMW Group provides the Grenadier's powertrain, ZF its eight-speed transmission, Magna Steyr its engineering partner, Carraro its chassis and suspension. Tremec manufactures its two-speed transfer case, Eaton makes the differential lockers, Brembo supplies its brakes, and Recaro takes care of the seating. Using common parts makes repairs easy, no matter where you are in the world. (And yes, it has the expected front and rear skid plates and rock sliders, and the oil pan, transmission, differentials, and fuel tank also have underbody protection.)

Unlike every other SUV, the Grenadier is constructed to last 30 years, not 10. That's why it's built using body-on-frame construction and with other similarly proven techniques. This means live axles and recirculating-ball steering that's been tuned to a remarkable degree. The proof comes in the form of the Grenadier's stats: a 35.5-degree approach angle, 28.2-degree breakover angle, 36.1-degree departure angle, 31.5-inch wading depth, and 10.4 inches of ground clearance. It even drives at a 45-degree angle. Certainly you can feel it when faced with the absurdly sloping Scottish hillsides. Its absorbent off-road suspension is the ideal antidote to our crumbling infrastructure as well as the forest primeval.

Plus, it hauls 1,841 pounds inside, while towing 7,716 pounds.

As you might expect, the Grenadier's function is its form. It doesn't look like a designer cartoon of an SUV; this is the real deal. The Grenadier's side rails integrate L hooks for mounting jerry cans, shovels, rescue ramps, or other items. The grab rails atop the side windows are useful as tiedown points or for holding while climbing into the rear seats. The Grenadier is strong enough that you can sit, stand, or work on its bumper, fenders, and hood. When it's time to call it a night, the roof proves to be a perfect perch for camping with a static load capacity of 925 pounds. Just be careful when you roll over in the middle of the night.

Its mission is reinforced once you climb behind the wheel and power up the BMW 3.0-liter turbocharged inline six-cylinder engine. Mated to a ZF eight-speed automatic transmission, two-speed transfer case and four-wheel drive, it generates 282 horsepower and – more importantly – 332 pound-feet of torque at 1,750 rpm. It's the perfect heart for this off-road warrior, with lots of power down low.

The cabin proves as functional as the exterior. Driveline controls are situated on a roof-mounted panel. In contrast, comfort and convenience controls are positioned below the center-mounted infotainment screen, which also houses the speedometer. In front of the driver is a small screen that shows only warning lights, so as to allow for concentration off-road. It all works remarkably well, in a straightforward, no-nonsense fashion.

Of course, body-on-frame construction makes it easy for Ineos to build another vehicle using the same platform and powertrain.

So, for its second act, Ineos introduced the Grenadier Quartermaster pickup truck, its name referring to "an officer in the army who is in charge of providing food, uniforms, and accommodation."

With four doors and two rows of seats, the Quartermaster's back half consists of a short pickup bed measuring 61.6 inches long and 63.7 inches wide, with a 4-foot, 2-inch-wide tailgate, four tie-down points, and optional utility rails. Payload is rated at 1,676 pounds; the towing capacity is the same as the Grenadier SUV. The Quartermaster's wheelbase is a foot longer than the Grenadier SUV's 115 inches, and the overall length is about a half-inch shorter than a Toyota Tacoma Double Cab with the short bed.

As an imported pickup, its price will be affected by the Chicken Tax — a 25 percent U.S. tariff on imports. However, the Grenadier Quartermaster's lifespan should dissipate any qualms over cost. Like the Grenadier SUV, the Quartermaster is built to last.

It's an astonishing start for Ineos Automotive, the world's newest — and best — outdoor vehicle outfitter.

NOW YOU SEE IT

With the hybrid-powered SF90 Spider, Ferrari continues to define its own definition of speed.

WORDS: Gabriel Vega Cortés

The Ferrari SF90 Spider is a car built to accomplish a near-impossible task. On the one hand, it's a plug-in hybrid saddled with the job of integrating a 4.0-liter twin-turbocharged V8 with three electric motors (two in its front axle and one between its engine and transmission.) On the other, it's a convertible with a folding hard top and an intricate mechanism that stows it in 14 seconds. A $659,101 exotic should deliver the perfect balance of speed and excitement, and by combining these feats of engineering, the SF90 Spider seeks to find this sweet spot.

The monster V8 serves as the Ferrari's foundation, generating 769 horsepower and 590 pound-feet of torque. That's 59 horsepower more than any other V8 Ferrari, an increase made possible by a redesigned intake and exhaust system. Up front, two electric motors make up its RAC-e system, which produces up to 217 horsepower and allows the SF90 to cruise on electrons for up to 15 miles. A third electric motor, sits between its engine and transmission, bringing this Spider's total system output up to 986 horsepower.

Like all modern Ferraris, the SF90 sports a Manettino on its steering wheel, allowing the driver to cycle between Wet, Sport, and Race modes. However, this Spider is the first Prancing Horse to feature an eManettino, a separate row of touch capacitive buttons determining how and when it'll switch from electric to its various hybrid modes. In the latter, it's preprogrammed to draw power from the internal combustion engine and

With a topped-up battery and 98 octane fuel, the SF90 Spider sprints to 62 mph in 2.5 seconds, to 124 mph in 7 seconds, and reaches a top speed of 211 mph. While these figures are undoubtedly impressive, they fail to convey the tremendous pace the SF90 Spider can produce in practically any scenario. Thanks to its responsive V8, aided by a rapid transmission and instant torque from electric motors, its acceleration is so aggressive and instantaneous that you have to recalibrate your perception of how fast a supercar can be.

It's a similar story when we look at how the SF90 tackles a twisty road. It is eerily balanced, even in the tightest bends, with tremendous levels of grip. Turn the wheel, and you're met with ultra-quick, precise, and nicely weighted steering. As the nose bites into the entry of a corner, there's an unshakable sense that computer systems are doing the grunt of the work. It's as if the car has taken care of everything, and you, the driver, are just along for the ride.

The Ferrari SF90 Spider is one of the most complex road cars ever made. From its twin-turbo V8 and tri-motor power-train to the breadth of its software-enabled capabilities to its cleverly sculpted bodywork and hidden aero components, it is a true feat of engineering, prioritizing outright speed over everything else.

HIGH STAKES

Fast cars, big money, and landmark transactions: The 2024 auction calendar is shaping up to be one of the most thrilling yet.

WORDS: Tyler Rampersaud

Auctions turn up some of the most intriguing, historic, desirable, and exclusive cars ever made. For the collectors who raise their paddles and the enthusiasts who eagerly await each lot, auctions promise great excitement in the automotive world. As the 2024 auction season unfolds, many remarkable sales have already taken place, with the resounding bang of the gavel marking many multimillion-dollar transactions worthy of placement in the history books.

This year's frenzy began with the signature Kissimmee auction put on by one of the most iconic houses: Mecum. A classic made headlines: The 1963 Ferrari 250 GT SWB California Spyder hammered for an incredible $17.875 million, including the buyer's premium.

Arizona followed suit with yet another exciting iteration of Scottsdale Car Week, where Barrett-Jackson broke records, selling over $200 million in total. A 1956 Mercedes-Benz 300 SL Gullwing Coupe took the top spot at $3.41 million. Worldwide Auctions also saw a 300 SL claim the highest bid — a 1961 Roadster for $1.215 million. Meanwhile, Bonhams showcased modern automotive engineering innovation and set another record when a 2022 Bugatti Chiron Super Sport 300+ crossed the block and sold for $5.175 million. At RM Sotheby's Arizona 2024 Auction, an exclusive 2020 McLaren Speedtail garnered $2.0125 million.

Then, all eyes turned to Amelia Island in Florida. Gooding & Company wowed at its sale this year with a historic 1903 Mercedes-Simplex 60-horsepower Roi des Belges selling for $12.015 million. Bonhams presented a reconstructed 1904 Gordon Bennett Napier L48 Samson Racing Car, which fetched $742,000. Broad Arrow Auctions sold a 1967 Ford GT40 for $4.405 million, and a 2022 Bugatti Chiron Pur Sport $4.0475 million.

Due south, but remaining on Florida's east coast, the prestigious Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables set the stage for the ModaMiami event. The highlight of the RM Sotheby's auction was the $4.295 million sale of a stunning 1953 Ferrari 250 Europa Coupe by Vignale.

Of course, the United States wasn't the only place where incredible auctions occurred. RM Sotheby's held auctions in Dubai and Paris, where respectively, the top sellers were a $3.38 million 2016 Koenigsegg Agera RSR and an absolutely incredible $11.1 million 1960 Ferrari 250 GT SWB Berlinetta Competizione by Scaglietti. Other highlights included a 2009 Mercedes-Benz SLR McLaren Stirling Moss and a 2023 Aston Martin Valkyrie Coupe at Dubai, and a 2016 Ferrari LaFerrari and a 2007 Maserati MC12 Versione Corsa in Paris.

The automotive auction scene's early indications suggest that 2024 is primed to be an exceptional year, heightening our anticipation for all the events that lie ahead.

TRAIL BLAZERS

The concept of the luxury SUV that proliferates today across all brands and price points traces its roots to all off-roaders of the past. For those who value that utilitarian legacy but also appreciate opulence and modern comforts, we present four models that deserve a space in your showroom.

1. MERCEDES-BENZ G-CLASS

Although it started as a military vehicle in the 1970s, the G-Class has become one of the most popular and instantly recognizable SUVs out there. Despite its popularity as a luxurious cruiser, the G has never lost its off-road capabilities. Today, Mercedes-Benz offers the Professional package for the G550, which adds all-terrain tires, a roof rack, and skid plates to take advantage of the G's standard locking differentials and excellent ground clearance. Although the AMG Trail Package will adorn the 577-horsepower G63 with similar equipment, the 4x4 Squared exists for those looking to take a $349,000 to places almost no other production vehicle could ever go.

2. BENTLEY BENTAYGA EWB

Sitting on the opposite end of the luxury off-roading spectrum is the Bentley Bentayga EWB, short for its extended wheelbase. Although it may not be as trail-ready as the Defender or the G-Class, the Bentayga delivers light off-roading prowess with a world-class cabin. Thanks to intuitive drive modes that manage the all-wheel drive, traction, and dynamic ride system, the Bentayga capably handles light trails and gravel roads. Although its active air suspension primarily works to absorb road imperfections, it can also raise the body for added ground clearance, allowing the EWB to wade through up to 1.6 feet of water.

3. LAND ROVER DEFENDER

While the full-size Range Rover and its Sport counterpart lean ever more into the luxury realm, the Defender stands out as the carmaker's off-road darling. Built as a trail-ready family hauler, the Defender's tall ride, excellent approach, breakover, and departure angles combine with locking differentials, as well as plenty of tech. Its Terrain Response system allows this Land Rover to automatically adjust its onboard systems to the exact road conditions while 360-degree cameras eliminate the need for spotters. Its adaptive air suspension can blend these capabilities with a plush ride for daily use. Unlike any other off-roader, this one comes in three sizes.

4. INEOS GRENADIER

The newest player in the world of rugged luxury off-roaders, the Grenadier was built as an homage to the original Land Rover Defender. Its maker, Ineos, covered more than 1.1 million miles, testing the flagship SUV across some of the world's harshest terrain. Built to prioritize off-roading aptitude over outright opulence, the Grenadier combines body styling with BMW-sourced inline-six powertrains and a simple but purposeful interior. Ineos plans to release an extended pickup truck version to tackle the second-largest-growing segment while providing the same level of capability.

TEE TIME

No need to sacrifice power for practicality. These supercars were designed to take you to the course.

WORDS: Jordan Aquistapace

Gone are the days when supercars were reserved solely for weekend adventures, synonymous with sacrificing space for speed and style. Traditionally seen as impractical for anything as ordinary as a trip to the golf course, these highline exotics were the epitome of high-octane excitement over everyday useability. Fast-forward, and it's clear the industry's leading manufacturers have embraced the concept of daily-driving the most expensive and exclusive supercars. By incorporating more passenger space and ensuring there's enough room for a set of golf clubs, they've redefined what it means to own a supercar. It's a new era where the thrill of the drive doesn't mean leaving practicality behind.

Every golfer should consider bag dimensions when contemplating their next garage companion. The standard golf bag spans about 45 inches in length and 10 to 12 inches in diameter. Brands like Ferrari, McLaren, and Porsche understand the need to accommodate extra gear for a day on the course and have dedicated a portion of their fleet to those who want to tackle everyday tasks behind the wheel of a race-ready supercar. Options suited to a country club lifestyle include the Ferrari GTC4Lusso, McLaren GT, and Porsche Taycan Turbo GT.

Ferrari shatters the stereotype that high-performance supercars lack practicality with the GTC4Lusso. The four-seater comfortably accommodates extra passengers with a spacious cabin, along with (most importantly for the golfers) more than one golf bag in the rear trunk. Under its sculpted hood lies a front-mounted 6.3-liter naturally aspirated V12 that delivers more than 680 horsepower to a sophisticated all-wheel-drive system. This recipe propels the GTC4Lusso to 60 mph in 3.4 seconds, topping out at a jaw-dropping speed of 208 mph. The blend of generous cargo space and track-inspired performance figures makes the GTC4Lusso a rare gem in the world of supercars, confirming that you don't have to compromise on power for sensibility's sake.

The McLaren GT made its grand debut on the automotive scene as the brand's first grand tourer, instantly capturing attention with an ingeniously designed rear hatch. Spacious enough to fit a pair of golf bags comfortably as a nod to the lifestyle of its target clientele, McLaren engineered the GT to pave its own way into a niche supercar category that has since evolved from a pioneer to an industry standard. Underneath its aggressive exterior lies McLaren's 4.0-liter twin-turbocharged V8 engine, responsible for generating an impressive 620 horsepower and a driving experience that's as smooth on a morning commute as it is thrilling on the open road. With a top speed of 203 mph and the ability to sprint from 0 to 60 mph in 3.1 seconds, the McLaren GT hits a hole-in-one as the ultimate everyday supercar.

The newest of the three clubhouse-destined supercars is Porsche's record-breaking Taycan Turbo GT, which recently sprinted around the Nürburgring Nordschleife with a blistering time of 7:05.55. With ample trunk space to accommodate multiple golf bags, Porsche effortlessly bridged the gap between leisure and performance. This model hits 60 mph in under 2.2 seconds and extends to 190 mph, exemplifying Porsche's dominance both on the track and in the world of professional golf.

Say so long to the days of choosing between your love for golf and your supercar obsession. Thanks to the Ferrari GTC4Lusso, McLaren GT, and Porsche Taycan Turbo GT, reaching the greens in style and speed is now the norm, proving you can have your cake and drive it too, all the way to your tee time.

Driver shakeup at Ferrari leads to surprising points finish.

WORDS: Ed Jones
PHOTOGRAPHS: Motorsport Images

It seems as though Scuderia Ferrari can't stay away from the headlines as driver Carlos Sainz is forced to take a break due to appendicitis surgery. This surprise operation caused Ferrari to give British racing driver 18-year-old Oliver Bearman a call up to take over for the recovering Sainz. At such a young age, the Formula 1 audience was excited to see how the youngster could perform in the competitive Saudi Arabian Grand Prix. After the checkered flag had been waved, Bearman managed to place seventh, scoring points during his debut drive for Ferrari. While he may have to give way for Sainz once he's recovered, Bearman has clearly made a great first impression. And, who knows, maybe we'll see a Hamilton-Bearman pairing after Charles Leclerc's contract is up after the 2028 season. Stranger things have happened in Formula.

With a seventh-place finish, Oliver Bearman became the youngest driver to score points during their F1 debut.

DON'T CALL IT DINNER THEATER

Supper clubs, latest trend in haute cuisine, blend old-world elegance with fashionable (and fun) entertainment.

WORDS: Roberta Nass

Frequently billed as supper clubs, today's most luxurious lounges and restaurants do not resemble your grandfather's clubs. Here, we introduce three of the top clubs in the country that provide experiential dining along with entertainment.

From top: The swanky lounges at Queen Miami Beach and Delilah. A sizzling steak takes center stage at Delilah.

QUEEN MIAMI BEACH

Once a landmark movie theater in Miami, Queen Miami Beach is today a luxurious restaurant complete with a posh omakase room and an opulent private VIP/celebrity lounge with its own entrance. The transformation from the Paris Theater to decadent Japanese restaurant with nightly entertainment required three years of development. Designed by Samy Chams and brought to reality by designer Carlos Rodriguez, the extravagance and sumptuousness is unmistakable.

Entering the golden-hued front doors beneath the Queen marquis, guests encounter a curving art-deco passageway with Italian mosaics and terrazzo floors and adorned with movie posters showcasing Hollywood classics — a nod to the history of the space, built in 1945. From there, guests enter an expansive salon with incredible Lobmeyr chandeliers (first unveiled at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1966) and beautiful marble bar. Moving around that bar to the main dining area, the size and scope of the room mesmerizes with a magnificent domed ceiling, another beautifully appointed bar, and a glass wall providing a view of the kitchen and chefs.

Owned by Mathieu Massa, the extravagant club offers the ultimate dining experience, not to mention a host of nightlife shows that feature singers, aerial acrobatics, and more. The five-star menu deftly blends French techniques with Japanese gastronomy — from crunchy rice to meticulously sliced sushi and fresh seafood delights, savory Wagyu beef cooked on a wood-fired grill, and a host of selections in between. The culinary experience does not disappoint, especially when paired with Japanese spirits and an extensive cocktail list with specialty ingredients. Three to four hours will slip by in no time.

LAS VEGAS: DELILAH

Delilah, located at Wynn Las Vegas, stands out as a particularly delightful supper club, thanks to its incredible décor and swanky vibe. Drawing inspiration from supper clubs of 1950s Las Vegas, Delilah features multiple bars, lounge-like "dinner and a show" dining, live music, and special performances. While embodying the true Las Vegas spirit, the interior also evokes Parisian salons and sparks thoughts of Hollywood's golden era.

Upon entering Delilah on the main floor, guests encounter a 34-seat bar and lounge area, beautifully appointed with jungle-inspired elegance, including leopard-print chairs and a large, sculpted monkey on the bar. Descending into the main dining area reveals another bar, a stage for entertainment, and opulent palm-tree columns in gold that form the corners of a smaller stage for a single dancer or performer. This level also contains two lavish courtyards with candlelit lanterns and walls covered in lush plants.

Operated by global hospitality partner H. Wood Group, Delilah serves a menu that delights. Expect premium shellfish such as king crab legs, West Coast oysters, uni, and black truffle shooters. A high point is the Delilah beef Wellington that serves two. This club is all about indulgence.

NEW YORK: BARETTO

A cult-like jazz destination, Baretto opened last year inside Fasano restaurant in New York City. It is a live music destination that offers some of the best jazz in the city that never sleeps. On the top floor of Fasano, Baretto springs to life every Friday and Saturday night. The space features a private bar, a baby grand piano, and an all-around sexy attitude.

Designed by Brazilian architect Isay Weinfeld, the club is rooted in a midcentury mindset that weaves in an air of sophistication and a touch of the tropics. It recalls the era of low-light jazz clubs from the mid-20th century and conjures thoughts of romance and secret rendezvous.

While the music draws the crowds, the food fulfills their highest expectations of New York City dining, complete with tall seafood towers and seemingly never-ending martinis. Baretto is more of an after-dinner spot where you can indulge in king crab croquettes, tuna tartare, and other elaborate bites. There are some surprising spins on the drinks as well, with accent flavors like peanut butter and maraschino.

Owned by Brazilian restaurateur Gero Fasano, who immersed himself in his Milanese roots in his 20s, Baretto at Fasano was born of his fascination with gastronomy. He began his career by opening a small eatery in São Paulo; today, Fasano has built a small empire of 30 restaurants and 10 hotels around the world.

GONE GLOBAL

You don't have to be a pilot to want a GMT watch that tracks time around the world.

WORDS: Roberta Naas

ALL IMAGES COURTESY OF THE COMPANIES

GMT, the acronym for Greenwich Mean Time, represents the "zero hour" standard, as designated by the Royal Observatory in London. Greenwich, England, earned its status as the point of 0 degrees longitude in 1884, chosen to aid in regulating train schedules. Today, as you travel the world, you either add or subtract hours from GMT to determine local time.

The GMT function on a watch gained popularity in the early 1950s, coinciding with the surge in air travel. Within the watch community, considerable debate surrounds the first brand to introduce a watch with GMT functionality. However, Rolex is generally acknowledged as the pioneer, having responded to a request from Pan American Airlines for a watch to assist pilots in tracking multiple time zones on long-haul flights. The result was the GMT-Master "Pepsi" watch officially added to Rolex's lineup in 1955.

Essentially, the GMT function adds a second hour hand to the dial — usually in a distinct color or shape from the other hands. Depending on the brand, a GMT watch might showcase a 24-hour scale on the dial or outer bezel, with the secondary hand completing one rotation per day, sometimes featuring two colors to indicate day or night in the relevant time zone. While the main hands on the watch track local time, the second hour hand monitors the time in another location, such as home.

The 24-hour scale differentiates the GMT from a "second time zone" watch, which utilizes a 12-hour scale, causing the second hour hand to complete two rotations in a day. Moreover, GMT watches with an independent hour hand and a rotating 24-hour bezel enable calculation of time in a third location.

Here we take a closer look at five emblematic GMT watches.

1. Rolex
Crafted in Everose gold, this 40-millimeter Rolex Oyster Perpetual GMT-Master II showcases a 24-hour day/night rotating Cerachrom bezel. Thanks to a technically advanced mechanical movement, the local time can be set by a "jumping" hour that moves forward or backward independent of the minute and seconds hands. It is finished with an Oyster bracelet. $40,600

2. TAG Heuer
Fashioned in stainless steel and driven by the Caliber 7 automatic movement, this 43-millimeter TAG Heuer Aquaracer Professional 300 GMT is water resistant to 300 meters. The 24-hour bezel provides day/night indication, and the hour hand for home time stands out in bright yellow against a blue dial. All hands and markers are coated with luminescence, ensuring easy nighttime readability. $3,900

3. Grand Seiko
From the Elegance collection inspired by the first Grand Seiko watch in 1960, this stainless steel Grand Seiko Hi-Beat 36000 GMT is powered by a housemade Hi-Beat automatic movement. The movement is shock resistant, water resistant to 30 meters, and antimagnetic. Gold differentiates the home time hand, and the 24-hour scale is on the dial. $7,100

4. Parmigiani Fleurier
The Parmigiani Tonda PF GMT Rattrapante, crafted in 18-karat rose gold, ensures ease of use with a pusher at 8 o'clock on the case, allowing for the advancement of local time in one-hour increments. Home time is displayed using a rhodium-plated hand that discreetly tucks beneath the local time hand when not in use. The Milano blue dial features meticulous hand guilloché. $65,500

5. Tudor
In stainless steel, the 41-millimeter Tudor Black Bay GMT watch houses a self-winding COSC-certified chronometer movement with silicon balance made in-house by the brand. Water resistant to 200 meters, it features a bidirectional rotating bezel with a 24-hour aluminum disc in blue for night and burgundy for day. The Snowflake hands are a hallmark of Tudor dive watches. Build your own Black Bay GMT on the Tudor website. $4,375

LIVE FROM MIAMI CONCOURS

WORDS: Mike Guy
PHOTOGRAPHS: Miami Design District

The 2024 Miami Concours, held in the beating heart of Miami's Design District, drew nearly 30,000 car enthusiasts and collectors from around the globe and secured its spot as one of the world's most prestigious luxury car shows.

This is the seventh Miami Concours, and the first with duPont REGISTRY Group as a co-owner, and nearly 30,000 people walked the red carpet that covered three city blocks lined with luxury stores from Dior and Cartier to Rolex and Prada to Burberry and Tom Ford—and many more.

This prestigious event, known for showcasing some of the world's most exquisite and rare automobiles, did not disappoint, with herds of one-of-one unicorns and a historical overview of the top supercars ever made. There was a hive of Paganis parked in row, including the one-off Vlu Tricolore Exposed Carbon-Fiber Pagani Zonda MD, a stunning one-of-seven Lamborghini Diablo VVVT, Porsche 991.1 GT3 RS, a pair of exquisite RUF 911s, and Ferraris in abundance, from the F40 and F50 to a couple Dino GTs, and dozens more.

Admission to the Concours was free, though hundreds of VIP ticket holders enjoyed access to exclusive restaurant seating, shopping experiences, and entry to the Friday night drive-in movie and Monday's Symphony concert. Notably, a portion of the VIP ticket sales went to benefit Nicklaus Children's Hospital, adding a philanthropic element to the festivities. Sponsors such as CURATED, Prestige Imports, Macallan, and Ralph Lauren contributed to the event's success, underscoring the industry-wide support for this prestigious showcase.

The Concours attracted a constellation of notable guests, who've learned to mark the weekend on their social calendar. Miami Design District founder and Dacra CEO Craig Robins was there alongside fellow Miami Concours Founders John Temerian Jr., Ronnie Vogel, Brett David, and duPont REGISTRY Group CEO Antoine Tessier. There were also influencers such as Paola Alberdi, Georges Coupet, and Ria Michelle, as well as Groot Hospitality Founder Dave Grutman and his wife, model and influencer Isabela Rangel Grutman.

THE BULLET

A chance to own the world's fastest Mercedes-AMG GT63S.

WORDS: Ed Jones

Experience unparalleled speed with the world's fastest Mercedes-AMG GT63S, a one-of-a-kind Edition One model dubbed "The Bullet." Meticulously crafted by RENNtech in 2024, this unique 1 of 1 vehicle has also set astonishing records, including unprecedented ¼ mile, 0-100 mph, and the pivotal 60-130 mph times, leaving all competition in the dust.

The inception of this remarkable journey began in 2019 when Mercedes-Benz AMG unveiled the GT as a 4-door coupe, instantly captivating with its sleek, aerodynamic design that hinted at its latent power even at a standstill. To celebrate the launch, AMG produced 375 units of the "Edition One" worldwide, each featuring exclusive Graphite Magno paint, vivid yellow accents, and Carbon Ceramic brakes, earning it the title of the most visually striking sedan globally. But the question lingered - was it merely an aesthetic marvel, or could it truly deliver performance to match its looks? The answer is: unequivocally, yes.

While many performance tuners had tried before to break the 10 second barrier, in 2023 with additional engineering - RENNtech broke through without tricks of the trade such as removing seats, nitrous, e85, and drag tires, achieving a verified 9.99-second run. RENNtech proved that the Edition One's performance was not just reliable but also consistently awe-inspiring, boasting 1196HP and 927 lb-ft of torque.

Yet, their ambition didn't stop there. Have you heard about a "Wednesday car?" It's when a vehicle comes from the factory, with far more power than the manufacturer had claimed. RENNtech knew they had a Wednesday car, so the owner said to keep going. The times improved in 2024. Even when lifting the throttle after 1000 ft this rare Edition One ran a 9.79 second ¼ mile, a neck-snapping 7.55 seconds from 0-130, and did a benchmark 60-130 in 4.92 seconds from a launch. "The Bullet" doesn't just look the part. Based on 2024 results with it's record shattering performance times, "the Bullet" belongs in a rare class of 1, qualifying it as the first ever true four-door supercar in the world.
